I asked this in Linguistics.SE, but got no answer. The answer to a question in English Learner's Resource Book for elementary: What is the earliest use of "oo" as a null final vowel? A: The word O in a word like shoelace might be a remnant of an earlier vowel which is now reduced in pronunciation to the O sound. But this does not seem to have been the case with the word oo, which is descended from a different previous vowel sound. A reference that I have found is Henry Higgins in a speech he made on the evolution of the English language, as recounted in his 1934 book English as I Hear It Spoken. It is the first chapter in a speech he made on the evolution of the English language: From my time in the Polytechnic, I notice the custom increasing of pronouncing the word 'moon' with that meaningless sound, which in the Counting-House seems to represent an O, as in 'boo-moon'—I wish we had more of it. The O is always useless, quite useless, is it not? Higgins discusses the word oo in a lecture of the following year in 1936, The English Language As I Hear It Spoken, and has a similar view on its use as a vowel sound. Perhaps his subconscious mind was still in 1934. A: The word "ooo" is not made up from a null final element "o", but from two elements "oo". The origin of this "oo" sound is not an "o" + "o" but a "u" + "o" and the "u" is backbiting by "oo" (see Robert Speelmans, Vowel and Consonant Phonetics [1972], p. 28ff). But the "u" has been reduced by speech to just "oo" and becomes a null consonant. So the "u" has a history of existence somewhere and there it 50b96ab0b6

Is there a CSS syntax for selecting a div inside a table cell? Something like: content Something like td { display:table-cell; } td div.myClass { background-color:yellow; } But it doesn't work.. I tried it but it doesn't work.. A: It doesn't work because elements are display:table-cell by default. You need to set table-row-group to the table in order to change that to block display. That would render your CSS like this: td { display: table-cell; background-color: yellow; } td div.myClass { background-color: yellow; } Q: How can I retrieve the last package update date? I'm trying to retrieve the last update date of a package from a SP list using PowerShell. I'm only interested in the date, so I'm using a regex to get just the date part. $package = Get-SPWebApplication "" -Identity "mysite" -Limit All $package.Update() $package.InstalledDate After that I'm using that regex to extract the only part I'm interested in: [regex]"[(.)\d+(.+:)(.)" I would like to use
